

Nemanja Lojanica was born on the February 4th in 1988. He has successfully finished elementary and high school in Kragujevac. He has finished basic and master course at the Faculty of Economics University of Kragujevac. Master thesis “Concentration of economic activities as a consequence of the globalization process” is marked as outstanding performance. During academic 2013/14, he enrolled PhD studies, and by now he passed all exams and prepare PhD dissertation (Modeling relationship between macroeconomic indicators and economic policy in the function of economic growth).

During his studies, he was awarded by Faculty of Economics, Belgrade Stock Exchange, Association of Serbian banks, and he has got scholarships from Ministry of youth and sports, and the city of Kragujevac. He participated at the international conferences in Poland, Slovenia, Croatia, Italy, and international summer school at the University of Graz (“Leadership and Education: The Future of Europe”). He has been employed at the ProCredit bank, a.d. Beograd, as a part of program “Young banker”. As a part of professional specialization, he has participated at the University of St. Gallen, and successfully passed the program “Time series analysis: Advanced methods”. In December 2017, he has successfully finished International Monetary Fund program “Macroeconometric forecasting” (final grade 90%).

He is familiar with computer skills (ECDL Certificate, Syllabus Version 5.0), and in 2011 he passed the B2 certificate of English in the Malta Language Centre. Within DAAD program, he has successfully finished Deutsch course (B1 Zeugnis). Currently, he is Teaching Assistant at the Faculty of Economics University of Kragujevac, research interest Macroeconomics.